

My 15-Minutes of Fame

Thursday, 05 June 2008

Chuck often chides me for spending too much time yakking it up on the Writer's Digest Writer's Forum. I've tried to quit, honest, but I'm addicted to that place and the people. If you are a writer or writer wanna-be, you owe it to your career to check it out. Not only do we have a lot of fun, but you will learn A LOT about writing, publishing, grammar, and why you need to kill your adverbs.

Earlier this week one of the authors started a thread about using real-life people in fiction, which inspired me to parody the Miranda Warning for writers. Maria Schneider, WD Editor, posted it here.

And now, I'm going to bask for a while.